Town 'on top' of oil spill

by Arlene Surprenant
Two emergency spills — one an oil spill from an underground storage tank and the other, a fuel spill from a saddle tank — created problems for Wilmington in the beginning of the new year.

According to one witness who preferred to remain anonymous, a puddle of oil first appeared by Lubbers Brook in North Wilmington Plaza last Tuesday or Wednesday. The local fire department was notified of the spill at 11:15 am on New Year's Day. Also called to the scene over the weekend was an emergency response team from the Department of Environmental Protection and Health Director Greg Erickson.

Fire Lt. Joe McMahon told this paper the oil leak, apparently occurred because a snowplow hit an underground tank on property owned by John and Mike Elia. McMahon said the fill pipe was knocked off, causing water to flow into the tank over a period of time. This caused the level in the tank to come up and oil to spill out behind Pine Ridge Cleaners into nearby Lubbers Brook.

Planning/Conservation Director Lynn Duncan said Monday the town is "on top" of the problem. She said Clean Harbors was hired by the property owners to remove some contaminated soil — about 20 yards to date — and to stem the impact to Lubbers Brook. Clean Harbors also set up four absorbent booms to absorb the oil, put down some absorbent pads to take up free-floating oil, and erected a silt fence by the culvert off Rt. 62, said Duncan. The director added she had no estimates on the amount of oil which had leaked from the tank.

Frank Phillion, a supervisor with Clean Harbors, verified his firm was hired to remove the contaminated material. He said, though the problem is "minor," Clean Harbors was prepared to skim the water and vacuum the brook, if necessary, once the ice thaws.

The issue will come before the Conservation Commission Wednesday night when the board is expected to issue an emergency certification for the job. If additional remediation work is required, the owners will have to apply for a Notice of Intent, said Duncan.

Lt. McMahon said Tuesday Mike Elia informed him the storage tank has since been pumped out and will be removed from site next week.

He added he was unsure how old the tank was or if it falls under the town's underground tank bylaw.

Anne Linehan, one of many residents who have worked to clean up and preserve Lubbers Brook, said she is concerned about the contamination.

"That's a very precious asset, that brook. We don't have that many brooks to lose," she said.

The second spill occurred at the Exide Battery Company located at 14 Jewel Drive. Over the weekend, a thief or thieves made off with two saddle tanks from a tractor trailer which had been parked on site. But before leaving, the robber emptied 75 gallons of fuel onto the ground, said Fire Lt. Edmund Corcoran.

"I'm pretty sure we lucked out on this," said Corcoran, referring to the fact that the fuel was dumped in a muddy area on top of frozen ground so there was no penetration of the soil below. He added the spill did not affect any wetlands.

Clean-up crews on Monday skimmed about an inch of the mud along with the diesel fuel and packed the material in barrels for disposal at a hazardous waste site, said Corcoran. He added the clean-up progressed with little problem.

In addition to the fire department, DEP and local health officials were notified of the spill.

Fire damages Broad St. home

The old year closed on an unhappy note for a Wilmington family. Yet, in spite of a fire in their home, the Bellamy family of Broad Street was able to move back in for New Year's Eve.

The fire was reported at 12:55 p.m. on Thurs., Dec. 31. Someone had been smoking in an upstairs bedroom and dropped the head off their cigarette. Unable to put the mattress out the window, they called the fire department.

Firefighters responded and were able to confine the fire damage to one room upstairs. Meanwhile, firefighters covered furniture and contents of the first floor, preventing water damage.

Damage was said to be the contents of the room, the walls, and windows, which firefighters knocked out to vent the fire.

The family had no insurance. After the fire had been extinguished at 4 p.m., neighbors boarded up the damaged part of the house with plywood donated by the Public Buildings Department.

Building and wiring inspector James Russo tested the circuits in the house and determined that the damage was restricted to three circuits. With those circuit breakers off, the power could be turned back on.

Deputy Fire Chief Dan Stewart called it a good effort by town agencies to help a local family.

Candidates seek return to 'normalcy'

by Arlene Surprenant
The two candidates opposing the incumbents in February's recall election are seeking office in order to get the Wilmington School Committee back on track.

Both Suzanne Spiris Rooney and Bob Surran told this paper, though they believe the recall effort has merit and incumbents Shirley Callan and Linda McMenimen were wrong to make direct quotes about the hazing incidents to the press, their primary reason for running against the veteran members was "to put normalcy back on the school committee."

"I'm not going on here with a personal vendetta against any person or group. I'd just like to see the committee get back on the track educating all the children of Wilmington," said Rooney.

Rooney is running against McMenimen, whose term is up April 1995. Rooney served on the committee for four months in 1987, when she was appointed to fill the unexpired term of her late father Mitch Spiris.

Rooney is adamant that she is not running because of the hazing issue, even though she feels McMenimen and Callan acted unprofessionally throughout the investigation.

"Certain people will not let it (the hazing issue) go and that offends me. It's affecting more than 14 students. It's over. The committee has to go on," Rooney said, adding, "I was approached by a lot of people (to run) and I know I can do the job."

Surran maintains he is not political, not an opportunist, and he feels he can make a difference on the board.

"I'm an advocate of the kids and that's it. I heard about the recall from the papers. I felt someone like myself, who has a record with kids, could be a viable force," Surran told the Town Crier.

Surran is running against Dr. Callan, whose term is up April 1994. He previously served on the board from April 1988 to April 1991 and was its chairman in 1989.

"I believe the recall has merit and the statements they (the incumbents) made were false," said Surran, adding, "Now we have to look forward, hopefully, by February, it will all be over."

Rooney and Surran have both worked with Wilmington youngsters. Rooney got to know parents, teachers, and students through her work with AIDS education at the high school and at the middle schools for the past four years. She is active in the community-based AIDS Awareness Committee and in the Wilmington Alumni Association and holds an Associate of Science degree from Endicott College.

Surran has been involved in Wilmington Little League for the past 11 years and was its president for the last eight years. He was a founding member of Wilmington Youth Soccer and has been coaching soccer for 10 years. Surran has also coached other teams, chaperoned dances, and taught CCD for seven years.

Rooney has three priorities if she succeeds in her quest for a seat on the board: coming up with a workable budget with as few cuts as possible, keeping the middle school concept alive, and helping the middle-of-the-road student who may be getting lost in the shuffle.

Surran has two main priorities, he is elected: balancing the budget with as few cuts as possible, and supporting the new superintendent and giving her "every chance" to get her programs across.

Rooney said she was "unsure" if she would seek office again if she lost in February. Surran said "If I am elected I will not run again. This is it, period."

The ballots cast for the four candidates will only be counted if either Callan or McMenimen, or both of the incumbents, are recalled from office.

Hazing complaint triggers state visit

by Arlene Surprenant
Interim School Supt. Peter DeRoeve confirmed this week four representatives from the Department of Education will be visiting the Wilmington School System on Friday. The visit is a result of a complaint filed by Anne Linehan. The complaint states that the system is not in compliance with the state's anti-hazing law.

According to DeRoeve, the representatives will be meeting with himself, several students, football coaches, the high school principal and assistant principal, the athletic director, and members of the school committee. The visit will take place between 9 am and 3:30 pm. The representatives will try to determine if all students were made aware of the anti-hazing law and if administrators filed proper forms with the state attesting that the system was in compliance with the law.

In letters to DeRoeve, Dan French, director of the Bureau of Student Development and Health, and Education Commissioner Robert Antonucci requested an uncensored copy of Principal Paul Fleming's hazing report. DeRoeve told this paper he only forwarded a copy of the censored report since he was directed by another state agency not to release the entire report. The superintendent added, if there was any problem, the state officials could contact the school committee, and the committee's attorney.

Following Friday's visit, the state representatives will correlate their information, write a report, and issue a decision based on their findings. DeRoeve was unsure how long the entire process would take.

Lights out

Wilmington residents may have noticed that the town's holiday lights were not lit during New Year's weekend.

The lighting display was damaged by vandals on December 30.

According to DPW Supt. Bob Palmer, the damage was extensive. In addition to destroying several strings of lights, the vandals ripped up wiring and conduit. The damage was on the Church Street side of the Common, on some of the smaller trees.

Palmer said that the vandalism was the first to occur since the town expanded its holiday lighting program.

Anyone with information which might be helpful in identifying those responsible should call the Wilmington Police at 658-5071.

Recall decision expected this week

by Arlene Surprenant
The court challenge of the recall of Dr. Shirley Callan was taken under advisement Monday by Judge Cowan in Middlesex Superior Court. According to Callan, a decision is expected to be reached by this Friday.

Callan and fellow school committee member Linda McMenimen face a recall election February 2 for allegedly leaking confidential information about the football hazing incident to the press. Both members have denied the charge.

Callan and McMenimen both challenged their recall petitions at a hearing before the Wilmington Board of Registrars, claiming some of the signatures were "fraudulent" and some voters did not understand what they were signing. The board upheld the petitions. Callan chose to challenge the petitions in court.

At Monday's hearing, Callan was present with her attorney David Klebanoff. The town was represented by Barry Altman, the son of Town Counsel Alan Altman, said Callan. At the hearing both attorneys presented their case, following similar arguments made at the Board of Registrars' hearing.

In addition, transcripts from the earlier hearing were also presented to the judge.

Callan told the Town Crier the judge will either issue a preliminary injunction, which would stop the recall election, or will call for a hearing. If the latter occurs, Callan's lawyer plans to bring in a handwriting expert to testify about the questionable signatures as well as other witnesses.

"No matter what happens it's all right. At least now I have somebody impartial to hear me," said Callan.

space for septic system?by Arlene Surprenant Wilmington health officials expressed concern Monday that there was no room for a new septic system on the Bay Street site of the American Legion Hall. The hall reportedly is undergoing renovations to make way for a new addition to the building.According to Board of Health Chairman Jim Ficociello, the frame of the new addition is up and is a different configuration from whathe saw in the original plan. The current septic system, said
Ficociello and Health Director Greg Erickson, is not big enough to handle the extra room. Erickson said all available land has been used for the addition and there is little left for a new system. He added, however, engineer Ken Miller was in to see him about the design of the new system.

"There's no way you can get a system in there. This is just not going to fly," said Ficociello.The chairman then said he was told the American Legion has extra land available to them for a new septic system. No one seemed to have any other facts. Ficociello said, if the system wasn't done properly, the American Legion could have a big problem with his board over an occupancy permit for the hall.Siracusa

as host of the Tonight Show? If so, then Wilmington Ford will remain as the only business that ever fired him.In an interview published in the Washington Post on Dec. 30, Leno was quoted as saying he had only been fired once in his life.The Post article dealt with speculation over how Leno will fare with David Letterman negotiating for an improved contract with NBC."It was 1966, and I was 16 years old and I was working in this Ford dealership in Wilmington, Mas-sachusetts," Leno, of course, is a native of Andover."I was carrying a big stack of hubcaps -- about 20 of them -- and I dropped one and the manager fired me on the spot.I didn't tell my parents I'd lost the job. I'd wait three hours after school before going home so they'd think I was still working. But I wrote a letter to Henry Ford saying I thought the firing was unfair, and about 10 days later, the manager at Wilmington Ford called me and said, 'How in the hell did you know Henry Ford?' and he hired me back."Professional Resource Center up and running in TewksburyEach year the staff of the Louise Davy Trahan School meets at the close of the school year to discuss goals and projects which will be focused upon in the upcoming school year. One of the professional initiatives the staff has identified for the school year is the establishment of a Professional Resource Center.
Last spring as we planned for the location of classrooms and specialists' areas for the current school year, a space was set aside for this purpose.In the fall a committee was established to meet and plan for the best use of this space. The purposesof the new space center around the following needs: an area which offers teachers a collection of curriculum materials and ideas to expand the curriculum; a space which allows us to centrally locate and make available resources, materials and equipment which had formally been located in individual classrooms; an area which offers staff professional references, publications and professional development opportunities.Currently the Professional Resource Center houses hardware which includes a laminator, book binding machine, duplicating machines, grade level trade books,big books and several professional publications and magazines.
Recently an Apple II GS and printer have been donated to the school and will be located in the Center. The Professional Resource Center offers staff a professional atmosphere in which to plan and develop materials. Staff members are encouraged to take their own materials and ideas into this room to share and trade with others.The Professional Resource Center committee is working to maintain and expand this area to encourage and assist professional development and interaction among the staff.PETERSON AND HARKNESS

Michael Caira explained the town never adopted an ordinance covering pawnshops. Caira explained only town meeting has the right to adopt a bylaw covering pawnshops.
Caira told Calder, however, because of his "excellent reputation," town officials and the chief of police don't oppose his request to buy and sell new and used antiques, collectibles, and guns and ammunition.Executive Director Ken Dorrance told the board there are 108 applicants on the waiting list for the low income homes and more than 50 percent of them are from Wilmington. He added the authority only holds eight Section Eight certificates. An announcement about the closure will appear in local papers.The board then voted unanimously to begin an audit for FY1992-93 to see where the authority stands, financially.
Members also voted in favor of a management review. They said the last review was in 1988.Dorrance announced during the meeting that he was beginning eviction proceedings against three tenants of low income homes who owe back rent and have not responded to his inquiry. A total of $7,000 is reportedly owed the housing authority. One tenant has owed money for more than a year and is in litigation with the authority and another owes money since June, the director said."We can't afford to run the authority that way," said Dorrance.

News item: Vandals loot the lites on Wilmington Common

frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

It might have been a scene taken from Victor Hugo's Les Miserables when state lawmakers, convening in the rare format of Constitutional Convention on Monday, displayed their outrage with the dictatorial leadership of Senate President Billy Bulger by unfurling a huge banner in the House Chamber reading "Saving the Constitution."

Rebel legislators were protesting another Bulger maneuver which sounded the death knell for a referendum on term limits.

It remains to be seen if the spirit of the Constitution can be saved but term limits is in fact dead, for the 11th consecutive time. Banners notwithstanding, term limit advocates, who eloquently made their case, were defeated by an obscure rule which allowed Bulger to close the joint legislative session without members taking a vote on whether to send the term limits measure to the ballot box. The remaining Con Con (Beacon Hill talk) was preoccupied with the annual tradition of Senator Paul White's dead on arrival proposal for a pro-life amendment to the state constitution.

Local legislators were angered at Bulger's parliamentary maneuvering which will yet again deprive voters the opportunity to decide the term limits issue.

"The abuse of power displayed by the senate president and the rest of the Democratic leadership is a disgrace," said Rep. Rob Krekorian. "It makes a mockery of the process and is nothing less than a blatant slap in the face to the people of Massachusetts." Krekorian, a term limits proponent since 1990, said the controversy in Bulger's actions center around the fact that over 70,000 voters who petitioned for a term limits referendum are being stifled. "This is one more reason why I refer to Bulger as the poster child for term limits," said Krekorian.

With the defeat of term limits, the group which appropriately calls itself LIMITS, is considering retribution through a referendum cutting legislative salaries and perks.

However, a more constructive route would be an amendment to the state constitution changing the requirement that the Legislature give its blessing to initiative petitions before they go to the voters. Seventh thousand certified signatures should be sufficient for direct passage to the Massachusetts ballot.

Unfortunately, for the constitution to be amended this way the Legislature would have to give its royal consent first. A political catch 22, if you will.

"In that case I think we're in trouble," said Rep. Marianne Brenton.

Briefly in politics

The Town Crier has learned from a well placed state house source that Wilmington's Republican State Senator Robert Buell is informing close colleagues that he will not seek re-election in 1994. "He seems to be upset that he didn't make leadership," said the source. Buell was bested in his bid to be the new senate minority leader by the younger Senator Brian Lees of Springfield, considered an up and coming member of the Republican progressive bloc.

"He's telling Republican legislators in his district that it's time to go and that they should gear up for the open seat," said the source. Those being groomed for succession may include Republican Tom Palumbo, Tim Clark and Bruce Tarr. All three are members of the House and well known in the Cape Ann area which dominates Buell's First Essex Middlesex District. But local contenders would not be out of the running as Wilmington represents a substantial voting bloc.

Buell's Beacon Hill career began in 1968 when he was elected to the House of Representatives from Boxford. After five terms he moved to the Senate in 1979, where he has served on the powerful Ways and Means Committee and as an assistant minority leader.

• Housing Authority Chairmah Tom Siracusa got a head start on the Wilmington political season this week as he pulled papers for a seat on the Board of Selectmen, following Selectman Dan Ballou's decision to leave office at the end of his term in April. Siracusa, a scientist for the Department of Defense, lost his bid for a seat on the board by a whisker last year to Selectman Chet Bruce. Siracusa first came to the local political scene through Republican party politics and was his area coordinator for Governor Weld's campaign in 1990. After his election Weld rewarded Tom with the gubernatorial appointment to the Wilmington Housing Authority.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

Some persons may have been satisfied with Al Meegan's exemption from the state ethics law, but this writer is not. There is entirely too much conflict of interest on our town boards and committees. It's not always easy to track down just where the conflicts occur because they are not always as obvious and the Town Crier is not generally interested in providing townspeople with that kind of information.

Not only have we had and continue to have public officials with direct personal interests and indirect personal interests (even if it's only their own reelection or the reelection of colleagues) in issues which impact the entire community. If one is truly interested in public service, why not serve on a board or committee where there can be no question of a conflict of interest. The public interest might then be better served.

Mildred N. Wolff

Dear Larz:

It is a wonderful event when our Armed Forces fight a war for humanity rather than a war of force. How grand it would be if all wars in the future were not battles, but gifts of humanities.

Deming Way had its problems last year. Let us hope that the New Year brings peace and brotherhood to our officers.

We have so much of which to be thankful, and at this time, I would like to recognize some of the many who have been so kind to us during the holidays.

The Carollers of the Baptist Church, the Cub Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Methodist Church group, St. Thomas, CCD sixth graders and all those others who gave us so much joy.

Thanks to the Kiwanians who put on a sumptuous dinner for us and thanks to the North Intermediate School Club, who cooked and served a delicious gourmet breakfast!

I thank you all, and wish good health and happiness to each and everyone of you.

Cordially,
Ruth Poor

The January 5, 1983 edition of the Town Crier of Tewksbury noted that:

The selectmen, acting as the board of public works was still hoping to collect $800,000 in unpaid water bills and that the bills would be in the mail the following week.

Mary Hill was pictured as she popped in two of her 18 points in the Greater Lowell Basketball Tournament victory over Wilmington. Watching the action were teammates Missy Riddle and Sue Rheault.

John Regolino of Sunset Road returned home just before Christmas following three weeks and two operations at New England Memorial Hospital.

A recent decision to apply for some $2,000,000 in state sewerage funds could mean some good news to Tewksbury residents, especially those who lived along Wolcott Street.

Legislature waits all year to work all night

by Bill Conlon

The Massachusetts legislature hardly covered itself with glory in the final days of the session.

New Hampshire, unlike the Bay State, has a part-time legislature. N.H. state representatives are paid a pittance, and they meet only part of the year. Somehow, the New Hampshire system works.

Massachusetts, on the other hand, has a legislature that meets full time, all year long, and the Reps and Senators are paid a salary that is sweet by any wage slave's meager standards.

So why are Massachusetts legislators perennially sitting down to a mountain of work on the very last day of the session, until the very stroke of midnight? A poor student puts off his homework until the night before the report is due, while a smart student gets the work done with plenty of time to spare.

A classic example of legislative ineptitude was the fumbling and scrambling over early retirement. To begin, however, Representative Jim Miceli is immediately given a full pardon for what is to come. Without Miceli's efforts, early retirement would have gone the way of the dinosaur, true justice, and the new Boston Garden.

The legislature enacted an early retirement program on July 1, but Middlesex County approved a funding schedule two weeks later, which disqualified the county from the early retirement law. That was in July.

A bill was filed to correct the situation, which languished in the Public Services Committee chaired by state Rep. Kevin Blanchette. A hearing on the corrective legislation wasn't held by the services committee until September. By then, Tewksbury was spending an estimated $10,000 per week that the town manager had expected to save through the loss of some 20 employees.

It wasn't until the third week of December -- at the beginning of winter -- that the correcting bill landed on the Governor's desk. The governor, however, didn't like the amended legislation and it was sent back to the legislature for more work.

In other words, five months were wasted drawing up a bill that was too flawed for the governor's approval. Political squabbling, this time, had a very real cost to at least one town -- Tewksbury.

Mind you, this wasn't a massive piece of legislation. No nuclear reactors, no hazardous waste incinerator, no new airport. Just a simple correction to the early retirement bill.

Thanks to Miceli riding shotgun on the bill, the needed approvals from both House and Senate were made on Tuesday, the last day of the session, and the corrective bill now sits on Weld's desk again.

In January, Tewksbury should have been letting employees leave early in August, or September at the very latest. If not for Miceli, the town would be out in the cold on early retirement, and layoffs would become virtually guaranteed.

So what good is a full time legislature? Good question. There doesn't seem to be this sort of problem in New Hampshire. Hmm.

25 years ago

The January 11, 1968 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Members of the School Committee and Permanent Building Committee requested a meeting with the Board of Selectmen for the purpose of asking for a special town meeting in February. They hoped to gain a month in the construction of the proposed Shawsheen Avenue School.

Garbage collection was greatly hampered due to recent snow storms and sub-zero temperatures. The collector would not enter a yard unless there is a path shoveled from the street.

Wilmington Kiwanis sponsored the Quannapowitt Players in "A Thousand Clowns."

A flood plain control study for Wilmington was in the offering.

According to Nosey Nancy, there was a day's delay in paying town employees the previous week - trouble with the check writing machine.

Nancy quoted Clayton Buck, an employee of the Brown's Crossing Pumping Station "In 1961 there were 10 days in a row during which the temperature was below zero, from Jan. 22 to Feb. 2 and the official temperature for Jan. 24 was 14 below."

Selectmen refused Bursaw Oil Company's request to construct a motel/gas station at the corner of Lowell and Woburn Streets.

Bob Small, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Small of Middlesex Avenue was serving at Cam Ranh Bay AB in Vietnam.

The first School Committee meeting of the year heard Supt. of Schools Harold Shea ask the members "When do you want to phase in kindergartens?" and "When do you want to arrive at a class size of 25 for elementary classes?"

Lucci's Market offered US choice heavy steer pot roast at 69 cents a pound; potatoes, 20 pounds for 48 cents; all Betty Crocker cake mixes except angel, 27 cents a package.

letters to the editor

To All Elementary School Parents in Wilmington:

This is to inform you of a presentation given to all elementary students in Wilmington during the week of Dec. 18, under the Project Charlie program as part of your child's regular curriculum.

The program, Drug Awareness, included a "guest lecturer," who just happened to be a former drug abuser. The information presented to our children was extensive and in our opinion, very age inappropriate. The children were told in very specific detail about alcohol, abuse, cocaine, marijuana, crack, and IV drug abuse, as well as the "addiction" of caffeine and nicotine.

As parents of first and second graders, we are very disturbed by the fact that the school system, without any parental notification or permission, felt it their responsibility to provide our children with an exposure to specific drugs and methods of using these drugs. We are very concerned that during this "presentation" comparisons were made between the "love of ice cream" vs. the "addiction to drugs" and the "fact" that their classmates (your first and second graders) may be "attempting to deal drugs to their fellow classmates." One first grader told his teacher after the lecture that his parents used to do drugs, but they didn't any more. (They used to smoke cigarettes).

The school department has no jurisdiction over our children's moral and social curriculum, and had no right to assume responsibility for teaching such issues at this young age. Many of our children did not know these words before this lecture. Unfortunately, whether you wanted your children to know these words or not, it is too late. The school department has decided for you when it is time to expose your child to the specific details of drugs and drug abuse. They also do not feel it is necessary to inform you of this. They could not even provide a written detail of what was presented at this "lecture."

Project Charlie is supposed to teach your child about self-esteem, and that is a good idea. But exposing young children to such detailed information regarding drug abuse is not. They will tell you that as "educators" they know better than you when your child is ready to learn and understand this type of information. As a "parent" you apparently do not know when your children are ready.

We suggest you ask your child about this "presentation." If you have similar concerns, please call your child's school. Talk to the principal, your child's teacher, or the head of the athletic department who authorized this presentation.

Concerned parents of Woburn Street School Children

Housing Authority defers vote on director's bonus

by Arlene Surprenant

Members of the Wilmington Housing Authority deferred voting on a total $1,000 bonus for new Executive Director Ken Dorrance until their February 2 meeting because they felt they needed more information.

Dorrance told the board Tuesday he was entitled to two $500 bonuses for completing projects related to the new elderly housing building at Deming Way (Chap. 667-2) and to the low-income rental homes (Chap. 705-2). WHA members said they needed more information before approving the bonuses, which are traditionally granted when improvement projects are completed and outstanding monies are returned to the state Executive Office of Communities and Development.

Dorrance said, while the paperwork on the low-income housing project is complete and the project is closed, he had just begun the paperwork on the 667-2 project. He said he returned $25,000 to EOCD but is keeping another $30,000 to force the state to address outstanding problems in the elderly building, like the need for an elevator.

"I see bare wires—that's against the electrical code. The parking lot's not draining properly. How we built a bathroom without heat is inconceivable," Dorrance said. He added an official from EOCD will be visiting him on January 14 to look at the problems.

Al Meegan said he was uncomfortable granting bonus money unless the projects are truly complete. He pointed out there was some landscaping remaining on one of the scattered homes and the outstanding problems to be addressed in the Deming Way building. Dorrance maintained a project is complete once the architect leaves and a year has passed. He said the outstanding work on the low cost home is in an attorney's hands and the project "in and of itself is closed out." The director added, had he sent back all the money and not held out for the remaining issues, the 667-2 project would be closed now also.

"I just need more information," said Meegan. He said he also wanted something in writing validating the bonuses. The board agreed unanimously to postpone the issue to the next meeting. Joan Sadowski and Dan Gillis were not present at the meeting.

Schools proud of meals

Did you know that the largest restaurant around is in the Tewksbury schools cafeteria? Daily the numbers served are over 2500 students within one and a half hours. These meals are prepared and ready each day by 11 a.m. at the middle and elementary schools. Serving children is the business!

We are proud of the meals we serve. Daily homemade breads, rolls, and baked desserts are made on premises. All meats, turkey, sauces and gravies are cooked from the raw state. Foods are oven baked and not deep fried.

Our menus have been evaluated by Framingham State College John C. Stalker Institute bringing positive results showing meals with less than 30 percent fat, low sodium and sugar, striving to serve nutritious meals.

The guidelines by the National School Lunch Program for children age nine and up:

Each lunch must include a meat or meat alternate. Acceptable guidelines are two ounces of lean meat, poultry or fish; two ounces of cheese or protein, the minimum amount. Larger amounts in higher levels. Lunch must include two or more servings of vegetables or fruit; a serving is defined as three quarters of a cup.

A bread or bread alternate must be included eight times a week - at least once daily. A serving is defined as one slice of bread; a biscuit, roll or muffin; half a cup rice, macaroni, noodles or other cereal product.

Milk is a must daily. Both whole milk and unflavored low fat milk must be offered.

We strive to serve the best meals, keeping our prices low and always remember: "Children are our most important resource."

Weight loss program at Y

The Greater Lowell Family YMCA will be offering a 10 week weight loss program beginning Thursday, Jan. 14 at 6:30 p.m. This class will emphasize a comprehensive approach to building lifelong healthy habits. Included in the program will be nutritional counseling and practical information on topics such as shopping, cooking, and eating out. In addition, participants will enjoy use of the YMCA's Nautilus center for the duration of the program.

An important feature of the weight loss program will be an emphasis on both aerobic and strength training exercise. According to the research findings of Wayne Wescott, PH.D. - fitness director of the South Shore YMCA in Quincy, this combination of activity will lead to reductions in body fat and increased amounts of muscle tissue. These changes in body composition will result in a metabolism that burns calories at a higher rate and promotes a more permanent weight loss.

Anyone interested in learning more about the YMCA weight loss program is invited to attend a free introductory session on Thursday January 14, 1993 at 6:30 p.m. at the Greater Lowell Family YMCA. For more information, or to register, contact Health/Fitness Director Cheryl Yates at (508) 454-7825.

Career testing at MCC

Individuals who seek a new career direction in today's competitive market can look to Middlesex Community College (MCC), Bedford and Lowell, for assistance. Through its Division of Community Services and Economic Development, the college offers two individualized testing and counseling programs. An experienced career counselor will advise students as to which program is most suitable to meet their needs. The first program consists of two hours of counseling, including individualized interpretation of the Harrington O'Shea Career Decision-Making Inventory which surveys interests, values, abilities and future plans. The program is designed to help individuals make educational and/or career choices. The second testing program includes an aptitude test, the Career Ability Placement Survey, which helps students identify strengths and weaknesses. Results are correlated with different career fields and can assist in the selection of school courses and training programs. The testing and individualized counseling which follows takes approximately two and a half hours. Individual appointments can be made by calling 617-275-8910, ext. 4961.

Wilmington graduate hopes to bridge lingering Berlin structural gap

by Brad Parmenter
The Cold War may be over and the Berlin Wall is just another historical fact for schoolchildren to study.

The physical structure that once separated a people has been removed. Berlin, though, still has something dividing East and West — modern technology. The difference is visible everywhere, even in the buildings. The West is highly developed, while the East has languished.

Shem Krey, director of construction in Germany for Tishman-Speyer Properties of Berlin, L.P., would like to change that. "Berlin is a very vibrant city right now," he said.

Krey graduated from Wilmington High School in 1970. From there Krey received an Associate degree in architecture at Wentworth. He then received a degree in executive management from UCLA. Much of the preparation for his international move, according to Krey, came at a much younger age.

"Thanks to my parents who reared us pretty much bilingually, I was able to pick up the German language. It was pretty easy for me to pick it up there," he said.

Krey said his parents had stressed keeping German language and traditions while they were growing up.

During the first World War and shortly after, Krey's father, a Lutheran minister, was trained in Germany to administer to German-American congregations.

Rev. Rudolph Krey and his bride Gertrude married in 1929 and immediately immigrated to the U.S., where they had five children. Later, in 1939, while were visiting his mother, Rev. Krey and his family were trapped in Germany. They couldn't return to the U.S. until 1945, after the war. While in Germany, they had another five children. Shem Krey said that the children born in Germany had a distinct advantage over him as far as speaking the language went.

After the war, the family returned to the U.S., where another five children were born, including Shem. Eventually they settled in a large house on Andover Street in North Wilmington. Two members of the family, John and Tizah, teach in the Wilmington schools.

Krey said he considers it somewhat ironic that, with his weak German speech, long a point of teasing from his siblings, that he should be the one who returned to the country.

Krey's company, Tishman-Speyer Properties of Berlin, L.P., has completed American projects, but according to Krey, they work largely in Germany. The company's most recent completed project is the Messeturm in Frankfurt. It currently ranks as the tallest building in Europe.

Krey is one of the people in charge of the company's biggest current project, "Friedrichstadt Passagen." It is the first major development to proceed in what was East Berlin.

According to Krey, "Friedrichstadt Passagen" is "like a passage through a mall."

The building will house 60 retail shops, offices, and 35 apartments.

Krey's role in all of this is to employ architects and contractors to design and build and manage the entire design and construction program. Krey says the company has been in the planning stages for the last 18 months. Construction started in September and is expected to be finished in early 1995.

Krey lives in Berlin with his wife Alice Kern, who recently completed her MBA at Loyola Marymount University. She specializes in international communications.

CollegeStart program at MCC

Middlesex Community College's (MCC) CollegeStart Program is a transition program designed for the adult learner who would like to start or re-enter college. It provides an opportunity for the non-traditional student to attend college classes in a supportive environment with other adult students.
"This program is ideal for adults who want to start or resume college," reports Evelyn Clements, dean of student development at the college. "They will enroll in a college course together and have an advisor who works directly with them. An additional one credit seminar, exclusively for them, provides information on career decision making and a chance to discuss common issues."

The program consists of two credit courses: Introduction to Human Behavior and Freshman Seminar for adult students. The program is offered once a week for 15 weeks. A daytime program will be offered at the Bedford Campus on Fridays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., beginning January 22 and an evening program will be held at the Lowell campus, Tuesdays from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning January 26.
Participants must be first time MCC students who have been out of high school three years or more. A special reduced tuition package is available. Call 1-800-643-5739.

Learning program for preschoolers

The Eastern Middlesex Family YMCA has announced a new preschool program that will begin a new eight week session on February 8. Members registration begins January 11 and open registration on January 18.

Computertots will offer preschoolers the opportunity to work with a graphics software program that is designed to help them with letter recognition, grouping and sequential thinking.

The goal for the program is to introduce computers to the youngsters and to use computers as an engaging and enjoyable tool for learning. Computertots is structured so that class sizes are small, usually a four or five to one ratio with a qualified instructor to ensure maximum exposure to the computer and the specially designed software. This allows the youngsters to learn from the computer as well as from each other.

Classes will be offered on Thursdays from 9:15-9:45 or 10:10-10:30 and run for eight weeks starting Feb. 8. For more information call 944-7989.

Americans with Disabilities course offered at MCC

Middlesex Community College's (MCC) Small Business Institute is offering a new course entitled "Americans with Disabilities Act - How Does it Effect Your Organization?" The one session program will be held Thurs., Jan. 28, from 6 to 9 p.m. at the MCC City Campus, Kearney Square, Lowell.

The ADA protects from employment discrimination individuals with a disability who are "qualified," who can perform "essential functions" of the job with or without reasonable accommodation. Implementation of the Act raises many important issues for employers, among them, how can employees define "essential functions" of a job and will the ADA foster lawsuits.

Instructor Cookie Sughrue-Sungard, a training and development specialist with Merrimack Valley Training Resources, will address these issues, provide an overview of the law, a discussion of requirements, and summaries of court decisions.

Pre-registration is required. Call 1-800-643-5739.

by Arlene Surprenant
It is obvious Frank Curley is fascinated with U.S. history and the Revolutionary War.

Since 1969, Frank has been a member of the Wilmington Minutemen Company, re-enacting colonial times and sharing his love of history with local citizens and school children. He has twice been captain of the Wilmington company and currently commands the artillery battery. Frank spent a good part of the winter of 1978 on a labor of love, putting together the "Black Rose." Using an already cast barrel and adding wood and metal fittings, he built his very own cannon. And, more recently, Frank is serving as Adjutant to the Massachusetts Council of Minutemen and Militia.

According to fellow Minuteman Bill MacKinnon, Frank has devoted nearly all his spare time representing Wilmington at colonial musters and other functions from Canada to Yorktown. Bill says Frank was instrumental in making Wilmington one of the cannon companies which salute the USS Constitution during its turnaround each July 4th. In addition, because of Frank, Wilmington has the honor of being the militia company that fires salutes at the gravesites of the signers of the Declaration of Independence every Fourth of July. Frank's "personal triumph," said Bill, occured this past year when Wilmington's cannon battery saluted the Tall Ships as they passed in review in Boston Harbor.

Frank, a purchasing agent for an electronics firm in Marlborough, lives on Hanover Street with his wife, Joan Jacobs-Curley. Frank's two children, Diane and Mike, both played in the Minutemen's Fife and Drums Corps.

To Frank Curley, his Minuteman activities provide "an enjoyment, a pastime" for both he and his family. From April through September, the Curley family participates in colonial musters all over New England. This involves camping and cooking out in the open and wearing colonial garb for the weekend musters. Frank has taken part in Wilmington's Liberty Pole ceremonies each May and has participated in demonstrations for the Boston Massacre and the Boston Tea Party. He has also been among those Minutemen who leave from Wilmington Common the night before Patriot's Day to make the historical 14 1/2 mile walk to Meriam's Corner in Concord.

When time permits, Frank and his fellow Minutemen share their knowledge of the Revolutionary War and do living history demonstrations before local school-children. When she can catch him, his granddaughter Melissa volunteers him for her school in Brookline too. Currently Frank is involved in making wooden buckets for the February 20 Colonial Ball at the Wilmington Sons of Italy Hall.

The Minutemen meet the second Thursday of each month in the company headquarters behind the Harnden Tavern. To be historically correct, only men can join the company though wives and other women participate in the activities and on his cannon crew, says Frank. To anyone interested in joining the company, Frank is ready with some advice: "Come on up, introduce yourself, and tell us what your interest is."

To everyone who knows him, Frank is the ultimate volunteer, giving of his time and talents for others. As Bill says, "Frank has represented our town well."

'Ice fishings' moment of truth

by Bill Conlon

In ice fishing, as in all pursuits great and small, there comes what could best be called the "moment of truth."

The flag goes up, you scurry over to the tip-up, and find the line off to one side, but not moving. Uh-oh!

If the line had been screaming off the reel, your next step would have been pretty easy to figure. Grab the line and haul in your prize. Doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that a running fish should already have the hook in just about the right spot, and a minor tug should slam the hook into bone.

But instead, in our test case here, the line is angled off to one side and very still. Hmmm. Tricky.

Your goal, if you hadn't guessed it, is to securely hook the fish and haul it in. That's what ice fishing, or any fishing for that matter, is all about.

But there's much that can go awry with an uncertain bite. Caution and skill make the difference between a failed attempt and a flopping prize on the ice.

First, wait. Give it a minute to see if the fish starts running. There's no rush, unless you're near frozen from standing in the elements, in which case you obviously failed to dress for the occasion.

If the fish runs, see the paragraph above.

If not, then you've got to show an inkling of skill.

Reach down into the water and let out some line by spinning the spool. Any tension at all on the line, even the slightest bump, could cause the fish to spit out the bait and drift off to greener weedbeds. That slack in the line makes all the difference.

Yes, that does mean putting your widdow hand into cold water. So be tough, eh?

With slack line available, lay the tip-up on the ice beside the hole and wait a minute for a run. If the run doesn't materialize, and it very well may not, you have to see if there is any reason whatsoever for standing there with your hands turning pink and your fingers freezing off.

Gently, slowly, every so daintily, take up your slack. Keep a finger on the line every second, to feel for that tiny wiggle that means something alive is on the other end of the string. Slooowly take up slack. Oh so slowly.

If you tug just the slightest bit and the fish spits out the hook, you've just lost a fish to "finessing" it. Too bad. It was probably a whopper, as if you needed to hear that.

If your luck is good, there'll be a tightening of the line as you take up of slack, meaning that something is limiting the movement of the line.

If you have no luck, a slack line will stay slack all the way to the hole.

Once the slack is taken up, your moment of truth has arrived. If the line has a wiggle, great. If not, the game still hasn't quite ended.

Your next step is to set the hook, a difficult task if you aren't sure of what's down below.

Setting the hook with a standard fishing rod means a long sharp pull. Due to the bending of the rod, your net result is about a 10 inch pull on the line.

In ice fishing, you don't have any rod to flex, so DON'T haul back so far that you fall backward. A 6- to 10-inch pull is plenty, and you can do that just by bending an elbow. A sharp yank, nothing more.

Losing a fish by over-hauling on the line, or by hauling in in like it was an anchor, is called "horsing" your fish. It was probably an even bigger than the whopper you just finessed away.

If the hook is set (oh happy day), you need only haul the fish onto the ice to win the accolades of the many who have gathered to watch.

A steady hand-over-hand style of hauling is needed. Don't give your fish even a half-second of slack or you'll be guilty of finessing again. Keep your attention on the tension. If it pulls hard, give it some line. If it charges the hole, pull like hell to take up the slack. Always, always, always pay attention to tension.

Also keep an eye on the edge of the hole. That ice may be sharp, and it can slice your line clean through in an eye-blink. Braided nylon is tough, but monofilament is itching to find a sharp edge and disappoint the hell out of you.

Also pay attention to the fish as it nears the hole. Don't be charmed by the size of the brute, because you don't have it out of the water yet, nitwit! Try to have a helper ready to put a hand under its gills once the fish's head clears the ice, because most fish that are lost get away at the hole. I can't count the number of times my monofilament has snapped at the hole, sometimes with an aquatic Godzilla staring up at me.

With the fish flopping on the ice, then and only then can you ease up, relax, and enjoy your victory. But hurry up and get the fish into some water, and fast, before its gills are frozen and it dies.

So, when the flag pops up, you're just getting started. The moment of truth is coming, if you're careful. Don't finess it, don't horse it, and don't lose it by making mistakes.

--- Tackle Box ---

A few ice fishing derbies are now on tap, with more expected. There are still plenty of open dates, if any group is interested in an easy fund-raising event.

Merrimack Valley Bass Masters have two events set, both at Lake Mascuppig in Dracut-Tyngsboro on January 24 and February 7, but the second date clashes with the giant derby in Meredith, N.H. Hmmm.

Greater Lowell Fly Fishers will hold their two ice events on January 31 on Mascuppig and on Valentine's Day on Crystal (Freeman) Lake in N. Chelmsford. Any others, please let me know.

Girls' basketball tourney

Ski for Special Olympics

On January 1, approximately 100 New England Exxon retailers, primarily in Mass. and N.H., joined together to kick off a three month long campaign in support of the Special Olympics. WMIX-FM 106 radio and Wildcat Mountain Ski Area in Jackson, N.H. will participate in the "Ski with the Tiger" program designed to raise both funds and awareness for the Mass. and N.H. chapters of Special Olympics.

Throughout this ski season, participating Exxon retailers will be taking the tiger by the tail and helping many individuals with mental retardation.

Through Special Olympics, these individuals are provided the opportunity to develop physical fitness and gain a sense of accomplishment through year-round sports training and competition.

Participating Exxon retailers will offer customers a $5 discount coupon on a lift ticket to Wildcat Mountain Ski Area with an eight gallon minimum fillup of Exxon Supreme from January 1-March 31.

Up to two discount coupons ($10) can be applied toward the cost of a lift ticket good Sunday-Friday and redeemable through the end of the 92-93 ski season. This represents a substantial discount on a $27 adult lift ticket (junior, senior, $17).

Participating Exxon retailers have decided to support Special Olympics by purchasing attractive "Ski with the Tiger" thermal commuter mugs. These retailers have donated a portion of the cup costs to the Special Olympics chapter in their respective state.

Customers can purchase these mugs from all participating Exxon retailers.

This winter Exxon will be involved in the 1993 Mass. and N.H. Special Olympic Winter Games to be held February 22-24 at Jiminy Peak, MA, and March 1-3 at Bretton Woods, N.H.

Was Schamiel deaf — or shrewd?

by Capt. Larz Neilson
The building which housed the store of Charlie Hudson dated from, as a guess, 1870, or maybe a few years earlier. It is to be described as a two and a half story structure, somewhat parallel to Church Street. The short end of the building was about eight feet away from the present sidewalk on Main Street, Wilmington. To the east, toward the store of Schamiel McIntosh was a two story building, an addition, with a chimney at the easterly end.

There was a glass front for the width of the main building, with wide windows and, of course, a door. In front of that glass front was a roof, over a porch, a place for men to gather and exchange news and opinions.

Several persons were to be noted as joining in the exchange of male gossip. Rudolph Porter was to be seen there, nearly every evening. Better known as "Dolph" he was the section boss on the Boston and Lowell Railroad. Every evening, when he had completed his day's work he changed into a good suit and went uptown to gossip.

Dolph had been born in Eel River, Nova Scotia. He was 16 when he shipped as "boy" on a Canadian fishing schooner, in 1876. When that schooner tied up at Gloucester, Dolph got off and started walking in a westerly direction, eventually ending up in Wilmington.

He got a job as a trackman for the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and, being a responsible individual he eventually was section boss of the track from the easterly part of Woburn to Wilmington, and from Wilmington northerly along the Wildcat to half way towards Andover.

The railroad provided a four wheel "hand cart" to the gang. One can guess that Dolph sat, and the four men took turns pumping on the handles. When the day's work was finished Dolph would walk home for supper, change his clothes into a "good" suit and head to Hudson's Corner to talk.

Charlie Hudson's store eventually was destroyed, as the result of a fire. As a guess the date was after World War I.

A new building was erected which this writer remembers as "Hudson's Corner" but that too was eventually destroyed, on account of a fire. As a guess that was sometime about 1924, because after that date the name of 'Hudson's Corner' seems to have disappeared.

Sometime about that date a man named McLaughlin opened a drug store in the store. If memory is correct McLaughlin came from Woburn. Schamiel McIntosh was an occasional customer.

One day Schamiel walked across from his store and purchased an item which cost 25 cents.

McLaughlin said the price, and Schamiel put down a nickel and walked out, nearly.

Schamiel had reached the stage in life where he was nearly deaf. When McLaughlin protested at the five cent piece left on the counter Schamiel counted with a "But I gave you a nickel!" statement.

McLaughlin the story goes, did not get anywhere with his protests, and Schamiel walked out of the store and back to his.

The remark made by (or supposedly made by) McLaughlin lasted for years. Twenty-five years later it was still remembered.

"Oh well," he is supposed to have said, "I have to be satisfied with a two-cent profit once in a while!"

Short-lived resolution

Some people set New Year's resolutions that are just completely out of reach. Take Peggy Kane, for example.

Peggy, a member of the Wilmington School Committee, told her oh-so-patient husband Dennis that her resolution was to keep her name out of the newspaper in 1993.

"Oh well," as "Silent Cal" Coolidge said to the woman who bet she could make him say three words, "You lose."

First aid course

Winchester Hospital offers a Standard First Aid course teaching lifesaving medical techniques such as CPR, rescue breathing, choking, control of severe bleeding, first aid for broken bones and treatment for poison and burn victims.

After completing this course, participants will have the skills and knowledge to assist accident victims who are in potential death and disabling situations.

This two part course is offered from 6 to 10 p.m. January 21 and 28 at the Woburn YMCA.

To register and for price information call (617) 756-2220.

A wartime voyage with tons of ammunition

by Capt. Larz Neilson
Fifty years ago, January 5, 1943, the writer took command of the Daniel Boone, a Liberty Ship which was anchored in lower New York Harbor. She was loaded, and ready to go. All that was needed was a captain.

The previous captain had quit. Possibly he had a good reason. There might be persons who would disagree with that statement.

The Daniel Boone, a 10,000 ton freighter, was loaded with 8,975 tons of ammunition. One torpedo could make an awful lot of noise in that cargo.

There was other cargo, including two locomotives on deck, each weighing 300 tons. They were chained to the deck, and as long as they didn't start to move the ship would be safe. But, if they did move, they could tear open the ship.

For a quarter of the crew, say 20 men, it was their first voyage to sea. Many had become merchant seamen on the thought that such a business was safer than being soldiers in the U.S. Army.

Before many days had passed those brand new seamen and messmen would have an opportunity to think that idea over.

The convoy was labeled US-G4. It was the fourth convoy to sail from New York to Gibraltar. There were about 60 or maybe a few less Liberty ships, and about five tankers, a total of 65 vessels.

The Liberty ships each had 3,000 tons of sand in the lower holds to help offer more stability. The idea was that if a ship were to be torpedoed it would sink without turning over, and possibly one could safely launch the lifeboats.

But such a ship, with a beam sea (from the side) would roll tremendously.

There was no such problem with the tankers. You cannot mix sand and fuel oil. Generally the tankers swam like a duck, and the commodore was in a tanker.

The convoy went southerly from New York harbor. If a submarine should be watching the submarine captain might guess it was going to go around South Africa. That was the idea, anyway.

A few hundred miles out and the commodore changed the course to northeast, as though the convoy was to go to England.

The wind was from the northwest, and blowing strongly. The Liberty ships rolled and rolled. The tankers — well, they swam like ducks.

These Liberties with locomotives on deck were taking a beating. It was not fun. Ship after ship sent protest signals to the commodore.

The commodore hoisted a general signal. "The course is as ordered, and will be maintained."

As the afternoon wore on one could see one Liberty ship after another pulling out of the convoy. The punishment was too much for the ship.

The Boone stayed in position until about 9 p.m.

It was about that time that the chief mate came up to the captain. The turnbuckles which were holding the locomotives were becoming loose. Something had to be done, and it was impossible to ask the seamen to go out into those seas. It was up to the captain to "offer a lee."

It was done. In 15 or 20 minutes the locomotives were again "secure," and the captain was ready to rejoin the convoy.

But where was it?

It seems, and this is a guess, that the commodore finally decided to "heave to" and relieve the ships of punishment. It seems that the Boone sailed past the convoy, in the darkness.

In every convoy the captain of each ship knows where the convoy will be next noon, and on the noon after that.

The Boone was at the prescribed noon position, but no other ship was to be seen. The only thing left was to tear open the "secret orders."

"Go to Casablanca" was the message in those orders. Casablanca is a port on the northwest coast of Africa.

That is where the Boone went, but, for safety the captain first brought her nearly up to the Azores Islands. On the sixth night out, at 2 a.m. he was 30 miles south of the Azores, and ready to start the voyage to Casablanca.

Then he made a discovery! About 20 members of the crew were swinging out a lifeboat, preparing to launch it!

On every ship at sea in war time the radio operator has an hourly position of the ship, to use if a ship is torpedoed. That position is for him to use in an emergency.

But he was showing it to the crew!

Everyone has heard that the captain is the last person to leave a ship. There is a good reason.

The captain knows the best way to launch the lifeboats. For crew members to take things into their own hands is to commit suicide.

The captain picked up a megaphone. "Go back to your rooms, or I will turn the lights on!"

They did. They were afraid the captain meant what he said!

Becky Osborne working in church volunteer service

Becky Osborne of North Street, Tewksbury, has recently undertaken a one year Church of the Brethren Volunteer Service (BVS) assignment with Loving Hands SERRV Gift Shop in San Marcos, Calif.

Becky is a 1992 graduate of Boston University. She received a Masters in Social Work. She has a BA in Psychology from ULowell. Most recently she worked as a staffing coordinator/direct care counselor for Arbor Associates in Boston. Her interests include dancing, music, walking and working out. Becky is a member of Grace Evangelistic Chapel in Lexington. Becky can be reached at 710 South Ranch, Santa Fe, San Marcos, Ca. 92069.

Loving Hands Gift Shop is an alternate trading retail outlet, which markets crafts from SERRV, Self Help Crafts, and imports crafts directly from Mexico. SERRV, a program of the Church of the Brethren, and Self Help Crafts, a program of the Mennonite Central Committee, market crafts from 40 developing countries through 3,500 churches and community groups throughout the U.S. They seek to insure a fair payment to the artisan producing the craft and work to improve socio-economic conditions in the developing world. Loving Hands Gift Shop is a program of the socially active North County Church of the Brethren which also works with refugees in the area.

Becky's assignment to Loving Hands SERRV Gift Shop followed an orientation at Camp Fincastle near Fincastle, Va. A group of 27 volunteers came together from all over the U.S., the Federal Republic of Germany and England. For three weeks they lived together as a community and studied such topics as Biblical Servanthood, Mediation, Central America, Welcoming Diversity, and Homelessness. The volunteers donated two days of assistance to Roanoke area community service agencies including Justice House, Salvation Army, and Samaritan Inn. By visiting these agencies, and various churches in the area, the volunteers were exposed to the urban lifestyles existing there. Orientation builds community spirit among participants through personal sharing, fellowship and increased knowledge of the world.

Becky is taking part in a long standing tradition of ministry through service. BVS, established in 1948, works at advocating justice, peacemaking, serving basic human needs, and maintaining the integrity of creation. Approximately 160 BVSers, in the U.S. and abroad, work with various peace, social and economic justice organizations focusing on many current social needs including child, youth and senior citizens' care; ecological issues, homelessness, refugee assistance; domestic and international peacemaking; and general community services. In exchange for their work, volunteers receive room, board and a small monthly stipend from their project. Brethren Volunteer Service, a program of the Church of the Brethren General Board, is open to any person 18 or older interested in service through a Christian program.

FONDUE POT PERIL

QUESTION: I understand that since fondue pot cooking has become so popular, there has been a great increase in burns and fires from this source. Do you have any safety tips?
ANSWER: The fondue elements of hot oil and open flame are burn accidents waiting to happen. Place the fondue pot close to an outlet so no one will trip over the cord and upset the pot. Never completely fill an alcohol burner. The oil can expand with heat, overflow and set fire to the table covering. Reduce splattering by adding a teaspoon of salt to each 3 cups of oil. Blot meat dry before adding to fondue pot. Don't wait for the oil to bubble. It could smoke and blaze before that.

Bruins' rookie lives in North Reading

JOE JUNEAU

He's bright, he's talented, and he has his education

By JAMES B. GOLDSMITH

The ice man cometh and when he delivers Boston hockey fans go wild and the other team's goal tender begins to sweat. Meet the Boston Bruins newest sensation but pay close attention because he moves quickly.

Number 49 takes a short, soft pass deep in his defensive zone. Within seconds his gold and black uniform becomes a blur in the hazy and humid arena. The left wing makes magic the legendary Harry Houdini only dreamed about. Quickly he's over the blue line shifting the puck from backhand to forehand without breaking stride. A head fake pulls a rugged defenseman and screens the goal tender for a split second -- long enough for Joe Juneau to light another red light and warm the hearts of 14,000 screaming fans.

The man from Pont-Rouge, Quebec, Canada is all business while playing left wing on the Bruins' first line; however, he is friendly and gracious at home. Dressed in well-worn jeans and T-shirt, the rookie left wing not only has found a new home at 150 Causeway Street but he's comfortable in his new North Reading digs.

The six-foot Canadian was sorting through a huge stack of fan mail. It opened the door for our first question - How do you manage to balance your professional and private lives and maintain some semblance of privacy? The 193-pound forward says, "I don't mind signing autographs, especially for kids, but some people want you to autograph 8x10 photographs and hockey cards. They sell them. It's brutal. There should be a way to stop that. It's a pain. It's tough to say 'no' (to autograph seekers). Sometimes people don't take it the right way. It's good for the people to respect me."

What does management think of autograph seekers who hound players and haunt practice sessions? Harry Sinden, President/General Manager of the Boston Bruins says, "It never was a concern but it appears to be now." Sinden suggests that increased security may be used to control the situation.

The tall, well-built young man has given his future a lot of thought starting as a freshman at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, NY. After graduating from RPI with a degree in aeronautical engineering, the hard working Canadian was at a cross roads; he had completed his third year at college and was accepted at graduate school.

His future looked promising, but he was dazzled by the options; European hockey, team Canada and the Olympics or a tryout with the Boston Bruins.

The raw boned lad with an innate hockey sense decided to pack his bags and head for Albertville, France and the Olympics with Team Canada. With a little urging the soft spoken man with a trace of Pont-Rouge French/Canadian dialect says, "I led the team in scoring with 15 points with nine assists in eight games. I was chosen the best player (12 teams)." Team Canada went on to win the coveted silver medal.

ANTHONY MA'CONI

It's the beginning of another year, another season and another reason to pursue our goals. Julie Andrews said it so beautifully in song in the "Sound of Music," -- "Climb every mountain; ford every stream; follow every rainbow; 'til you find your dream."...I invited Aunt Nora to go to church with me Christmas Day. "No thank you," she exclaimed. "I don't want people seeing me get out of that 'clunker' of yours. It's the oldest car in the church parking lot!" "So what?" I said, "You're probably the oldest woman going to church."

Father John Crispo said, "I wish all of you a Merry Christmas and, for some of you who won't be back until April, a Happy New Year, Happy St. Patrick's Day and a Happy Easter."...Ruth O'Leary said to me, "Cooking doesn't require much intelligence otherwise 'men' wouldn't be able to do it."

Most motorist's cars have one plate, dentist's cars have two - an upper plate and a lower plate...I told Don Jarvie that Kathy and I had an argument last week and she forced me to sleep in the spare bedroom. Don smiled and said, "Chipper, if she was my wife, I'd

by phyllis nissen

--Prompted by an incident involving members of the high school volleyball team - and the feeling by both Superintendent of Schools Dr. John Flores and high school principal Kristine Burke that there was an attitude among some students that athletes should go through a rite of passage to participate in school sports - Lynnfield High students were recently requested to attend a mandatory workshop designed to raise consciousness about sexual harassment and hazing.

Approximately 150 students and adults attended the 90-minute afterschool workshop, mandatory for all high school athletic coaches; varsity athletes, captains and co-captains of the fall, winter and spring teams; activities advisors; and two student representatives from each student organization.

Presented by attorneys John Bartley, author of the 1987 state hazing law and Ann Coolidge, an expert in sexual harassment in the workplace, the workshop was precipitated by an incident involving the girls' volleyball team and was intended to caution students that subtle as well as extreme behaviors can be interpreted as hazing.

A videotape of the workshop is available for parents and students; and a similar workshop for K-12 faculty is planned for later in the school year.

--Originally a creation of the 1950s and '60s to protect college professors with unpopular political opinions, tenure - according to the Woburn edition of the Daily Times Chronicle - grants a teacher special protections against being fired, and sets in place a rigorous set of criteria that must be met before a teacher can be fired.

A teacher-evaluations consultant, hired two years ago by the Woburn School Committee, said that getting rid of a bad but tenured teacher can take up to three years of procedural work.

Tenured teachers, reports the "Times," cannot be let go for economic reasons unless there are extraordinary, unforeseen circumstances, according to their contract.

Woburn's habit of waiting to discuss and vote on tenure until teachers had already begun work in their fourth year put the School Committee in a position of rubber-stamping an existing situation.

If the committee had not recently decided to postpone voting on tenure for nine teachers, it would have put itself in the position of not being able to fire any for poor performance without going through the lengthy procedure reserved for the tenured.

--According to Reading Board of Selectmen Chairman Dan Ensminger, author of the oft cited Ensminger Report on school population growth, the Reading school population will jump by 575 students by the year 2,003.

The figures in his latest update surpass those prepared for the School Building Committee in 1991 and will be used by the committee in its report to Town Meeting.

According to Ensminger, the elementary school population will increase from its present 1,820 to 1,960; the middle school population from 780 to 1,015; the high school from 960 to 1,237.

Known throughout the village as something of a guru, Ensminger actually used the "cohort survival" population projection technique, taking an initial census of men and women in each school district and aging the population one year at a time by adding expected births, subtracting expected deaths, and adjusting for expected migration of men and women by age group.

The Reading community is taking note - Ensminger has been right on the money so far. Word among those experiencing overcrowding already is that Town Meeting members - rejecting school building funding - have not.

MR. and MRS. JAMES IMMERMANN of Acton, formerly of Reading, announce the birth of their son, David James, on December 21, 1992 at Mt. Auburn Hospital. Grandparent honors are extended to Mr. and Mrs. David Immermann of Reading and Mr. and Mrs. W. Collins of Stamford, Connecticut.

Dialysis Center now open at NEMH in Stoneham

DR. BIRJINDER SINGH, medical director of Stoneham Quality Care Dialysis Center, inspects one of the Center's new machines.

New England Memorial Hospital is pleased to announce that the Stoneham Quality Care Dialysis Center is now open in Suite 119 of the hospital's Medical Office Building. In addition to out patient dialysis services, peritoneal dialysis and home dialysis training facilities are also available at this site.

Birjinder Singh, M.D., board certified in nephrology and internal medicine, is medical director of the Stoneham Quality Care Dialysis Center. He notes, "Many dialysis patients have multiple medical problems. The close proximity of our center to the full range of acute care services of New England Memorial Hospital is a great advantage for our patients."

Dialysis is a treatment that does some of the things done by normal kidneys. It is needed when a person's kidneys can no longer take care of the body's needs. In the United States, more than 120,000 people are treated by dialysis.

"Dialysis treatments are often necessary three times per week and usually last three or four hours each. High quality care, comfort and convenience are essential for people undergoing the treatments," explains Singh.

Stoneham Quality Care Dialysis Center has a home training center, isolation room, and 13 patient care stations. Each station is equipped with a new state-of-the-art dialysis machine; comfortable, adjustable chair; personal tv and entertainment panel; and a portable phone for patient use.

The center also features ground floor accessibility, free parking, and regular daytime as well as evening and weekend hours. It is conveniently located off I-93.

For more information about the services of Stoneham Quality Care Dialysis Center call Neal Stephany or Dr. Birjinder Singh at (617) 665-5544.

About the Towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

"About The Towns" covers recent events in the 13-town Middlesex East area. Because Middlesex East deadlines are early, please check the front sections of this paper for up-to-date information about your city or town. We also welcome original material - please send it to Phyllis Nissen, "About The Towns," Middlesex East Supplement, Box 240, Reading, MA 01867.

WAKEFIELD - Retired NATO Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, Wakefield native, and occasional "Today" show visiting expert, General John R. Galvin was expected to leave this month for Siberia to take part in a humanitarian mission delivering food and medicine to Russian military men and their families.

The journey is related to his involvement during the past two years in meetings at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government with Russian military leaders, many of whom are feeling the effects of the dissolution of the former USSR.

Galvin has also been lecturing at West Point on international affairs and working on his fourth book, a history of the Cold War.

BURLINGTON - Taxes in Burlington for the average home have increased $50 although rates vary with some homeowners paying more and others, the same.

The tax rate increased from $10.30 to $10.90 per thousand dollars of valuation for residential properties and from $22.60 to $26.10, an increase of 1.31 percent, for commercial and industrial properties.

According to Town Accountant Patrick Mullin, property values in town decreased $1.42 million, ranging from no decrease to 11 percent for residential properties which suffered a net decline in value of two percent. Commercial and industrial properties suffered an overall decline of 14 percent.

He attributes the drop-off in commercial values as a factor in the decision to shift 0.4 percent of the property tax burden from the business sector to residents, a proposal which Burlington Selectmen unanimously approved.

Mullin notes that residential property tax bills are $300 less than what they were in 1981.

READING - Improvements to the tune of $160,000 planned for the intersection of Main and Washington streets in Reading are on the backburner along with about 150 similar projects throughout the state which have been abruptly deleted from the state's Transportation Improvement Program.

State transportation officials have opted instead to use about $72 million in available funds for expansion of the Old Colony Rail line, the Fan Pier and other upgrades for the MBTA rail system.

What angers town officials, according to the Reading edition of the Daily Times Chronicle, is that an equivalent of approximately $80,000 in staff time has already been used in project plan design; and according to Town Planner Jonathan Edwards, the town received no advance warning that Reading's project would be deleted - Edwards read about it in a newsletter handed out at a Metropolitan Area Planning Council gathering in the state Transportation Building in Boston.

When he asked officials why the project had been deleted and how it could be reactivated, they answered that they didn't have enough staff to inform everyone and they were still working on a re-entry procedure.

The intersection at Main and Washington is Reading's worst intersection and made the state's top 100 list of worst intersections.

SENIOR CENTER - "The less appetizing news made by Reading today," reads a recent report in "Chronicle" in the Reading edition of the Daily Times Chronicle, was further airing of the first-floor toilet controversy at the new Senior Citizen's center at the town's former central fire station.

"That flap was debated on WHDH's Clapgood and Whitey talk show and featured local citizens as well as town officials discussing the issue and ruminating on the prospects of a discrimination suit being filed by those who would prefer a first floor toilet adjacent to the main meeting-eating space, instead of the inconvenience of using facilities on the second floor and basement."

Letters to the editor...

The Stoneham High School Class of 1967 held a 25th Reunion on Friday, November 27, at the Ramada Hotel in Andover. Approximately 145 people attended the reunion. The following alumni worked as a committee to plan the night's events: Joe Carroll, Susan (Barbo) DeAngelis, Anne "Penny" Harrington, Karen (Restucia) Hurley, Linda (Merlino) O'Brien, Ron Peterson and Michael Scarpitto.

Six Stoneham High School teachers, Paul Atkinson, Cathy Broderick, Dottie Corum, Maria Garuti, Bob Margarita and Bob Silverman, were cordially invited as guests of the 1967 class. A memorable evening was spent with former classmates, renewing old friendships.

As a tribute to Stoneham High School, the class of 1967 has made a special donation to be put toward the SHS Scholarship Fund for an award to a 1993 graduate. At the 20th class reunion, the '67 class donated an award to a 1988 graduate, and they have generously repeated and increased the donation this year. The members of the 1967 class would like to set a precedent and encourage other alumni classes to support this scholarship drive.

A raffle, consisting of over 30 prizes was established to raise the funds for the scholarship. Many thanks should be given to the following businesses who generously donated valuable prizes that were won by several members of the SHS alumni: Angelo's Ristorante; Baskin-Robbins;

Block Buster Video; Brigham's; Burger King; Caldor; City Cycle; Curran Automotive; C.W.T.; Dairy Dome; Denny's; Friendly's; Gloucester Seafood; Ground Round; Harrow's Restaurant; International House of Pancakes Restaurant; J's Lighthouse; Liberty Bell; Lord & Taylor Salon; Kentucky Fried Chicken; My Brother's Place; National Pet Center; Nino's Restaurant; Our Kitchen; Papa Gino's; Ramada Hotel; Salads, Etc.; Salon Underground; Santoro's Sub Shop; Shaw's Super Market; Stop & Shop; Subway; T.C.B.Y.; and True Value Hardware.

Special thanks are to be given to the following class members who also donated time and helped to make the reunion night successful and memorable: Stephanie (Becky) Anderson, Paul Downing, Kevin Forrest, Karen (Restucia) Hurley, Larry Rotondi and Saul Weiss. Their contributions were greatly appreciated by all who attended the 25th Class Reunion of the 1967 class.

Joe Juneau

It seems that Joe's mom and dad weren't the only people watching this young hockey player's home college games. The more Sinden saw of this youngster the better he liked his play-making ability and work ethic. Sinden's book on Joe Juneau began in the lad's freshman year at RPI.

What are the odds for a player selected in the National Hockey League draft making it as a pro? Sinden, who was a professional and amateur hockey coach for ten years and was captain of Canada's 1960 Olympic hockey team, says, "There are 11 rounds on our amateur (NHL) draft with about 250 players. The odds are 50-60 percent sure if a player is picked in the first round (first 24 picks). They drop drastically after that. With Juneau, he was not a well-known kid - we took a chance and let him go for a couple of rounds" (before signing him to a four-year contract).

What happens if a hockey player doesn't make the grade in the Adams division of the National Hockey League? Joe Juneau ponders the question thoughtfully and tells this writer he completed his undergraduate program at RPI in three years and has completed some courses toward his masters degree in aeronautical engineering.

The flashy left wing says, "It's there if I need it. For now I want to concentrate on hockey. I might like being a spokesperson for a corporation without having it interfere with hockey."

What's it like playing in front of 14,000 screaming, partisan and, in some cases, obnoxious fans? The 24-year-old forward who plays left wing on the first line with Adam Oates and Steve Leach says, "It's fun. Especially when the team does good. I got used to it real quick. I played before 15,000 people in a Pee Wee tournament at Le Colisee, Quebec when I was 11 years old."

What thoughts race through Joe Juneau's mind when he lines up on the blue line before René Rancourt sings the Star Spangled Banner? The young man with the full head of brown, tousled hair lets the question float down like confetti above the dark and dusty Boston Garden rafters.

Slowly it flutters past 16 championship banners just out of reach of the gallery gods. Number 49 says, "The opening face-off -- anything. It's always different. I look at the guys on the other team. Sometimes you just listen to the song."

What's on Sinden's mind when the Zamboni disappears leaving a shiny smooth surface which the goal tenders like to rough up in front of the crease? The likeable general manager gets psyched every time Rancourt brings the Garden crowd to its feet with the national anthem. Sinden says, "I'm a guy who has been doing it for so many years (21), but I still get excited and usually go through the butterfly period. I'm thinking of the public and the press and who we are playing and how we are going to play."

What do Harry Sinden and Coach Brian Sutter look for in a top amateur prospect and what did they find in young Joe Juneau? Sinden doesn't have to ponder this question long. Everything is in sync when the question is dropped like a puck on opening faceoff. Harry says, "Character comes to mind; playing takes a lot of courage and mental capacity. His skills are skating, checking, shooting, passing and leadership qualities. His skating skills include balance, strength, agility and speed - he takes a check well and moves laterally as well as any player we ever had."

How is the newest North Reading resident doing in the Adams Division of the NHL? Sinden savors the question and says, "He's doing exceptionally well. He should be a better scorer and shoot more. His defensive game (backchecking) is pretty good but it can be better." He was selected National Hockey League Rookie of the month in November.

The veteran Bruins general manager is an excellent judge of hockey talent and character and probably the best person to answer this question - what kind of man is Joe Juneau? Sinden says, "He's rather independent but also a team man. He is independent without being offensive. He's a credit to our team and the community. He is very interested in flying and very interested in fishing." When Juneau unlaces his skates and becomes citizen Juneau he likes to travel to Lawrence where he flies single engine airplanes. It's a perfect fit with his interest in aeronautical engineering.

Many knowledgeable hockey fans think this quiet hard working Boston Bruin has a good shot at winning top rookie honors in the Wales Conference of the NHL. They think the Calder Trophy is waiting in the wings and young Juneau is flying toward it. After the 4-3 Boston win over the Quebec Nordiques, November 30, Juneau became the leading scorer among NHL rookies with 10 goals and 25 assists for 35 points.

What does Sinden think of his rising star's chances of winning the Calder? The likeable 60-year-old GM says, "He's a strong contender and he's got some strong competition." With guys like Eric Lindros, Scott LaChance, Alexi Kovalev and Shawn McEachern skating the lanes and lining up forwards for punishing body checks Juneau isn't shoe-in for this prestigious trophy. Number 49 is making believers of fans and other NHL players. The rugged man with a dream is much more than a fine pro hockey player. Citizen Juneau has a private life. Root for him and the Boston Bruins but give the guy a break. Remember his advice, "It's good for people to respect me."

Reduction mammoplasty beneficial to health

"I'm in love for the first time since 1975," says 68-year old Magdelene Yetman-Higgins of Stoneham, smiling like an infatuated schoolgirl. In this case, she's talking about Sam Ciulla, a retired teacher from Salem, NH, whom she has been dating since April. But she could also be talking about her renewed love affair with life itself.

Ms. Yetman-Higgins, says there are many women for whom breast reduction would be beneficial who are not aware that it could be covered by insurance.

"Most people who can benefit from this procedure are those who have complaints of upper back and neck discomforts from their brassiere straps," explains the board-certified plastic surgeon.

look on life. "I'm healing beautifully, both physically and emotionally. I'm beginning to hold my upper back better than ever." Just a few weeks after the procedure, she has been getting outdoors as much as possible -- taking walks, visiting friends and relatives, being happy again. "I have more confidence now; I love my new image. I might even try tennis

Cntd. to S-9

MAGDELENE YETMAN-HIGGINS, age 68, who suffered years of discomfort has a new zest for life as a result of breast reduction surgery and meeting Sam Ciulla. The operation was performed by Dr. Gurmander S. Kohli of The Center for Plastic Surgery and Personal Development in Stoneham.

For almost a decade, Ms. Yetman-Higgins had been in severe pain from arthritis. Once an avid horsewoman who played tennis regularly, she had been restricted from the activities she enjoyed as the pain in her lower, and particularly upper, back got progressively worse over the years.

"I was becoming more and more depressed, and I don't usually allow myself to stay that way," Ms. Yetman-Higgins explains. "Because I am a positive person, I try to keep other people up too. So when I started going down, then it was a false happiness people saw."

Until about a year ago, Ms. Yetman-Higgins felt as though the pain was all she had left. "I really didn't have any goals in life anymore. I didn't see anything to live for. I said to myself 'Here I am nearing 70, and what is out there for me?' I hurt so badly that I would come in around three in the afternoon and lie down, and I wouldn't go out for the rest of the day."

What Ms. Yetman-Higgins didn't realize was that her upper back discomfort could be eased with breast reduction surgery, also called reduction mammoplasty. "I had heard about the surgery, but I thought it was done only for cosmetic reasons. I didn't realize that I'd be a candidate through my health insurance."

Dr. Gurmander S. Kohli, who is the medical director of The Center for Plastic Surgery and Personal Development at New England Memorial Hospital and who performed the surgery on

JIMMY CARTER AT AUTHOR SERIES

Former President Jimmy Carter will discuss his new book, "Turning Point: A Candidate, a State, and a Nation Come of Age," in the initial program of the Harvard Book Store Cafe Winter Author Series at the Boston Public Library in Copley Square on Sunday evening, Jan. 10th, at 6 p.m.

In 1962, the South was the setting for a showdown between the entrenched segregationist order of the old Confederacy and the forces of change mandating equality and civil rights. In his new book the former president recreates his own personal role in that drama, and turning point in American history, when the political tide turned in favor of social justice.

The Central Library will be open at 5:30 p.m. only for those people attending this reading in the Rabb Lecture Hall. The program is free and open to the public, although seating is limited. An autographing session will immediately follow at the Harvard Book Store Cafe on Newbury Street. For more information, please call the Boston Public Library at (617) 536-5400, Ext. 336.

MOTHERS AND BABIES EXERCISE PROGRAM

Becoming pregnant and giving birth to a beautiful and healthy child is a wonderful experience. The joys that the new child brings into your life certainly makes the nine months worth it. The weight one puts on during a pregnancy, however, can be a bit difficult to lose. With a newborn at home, finding time to attend an exercise program can be next to impossible.

"Mothers and Babies Exercise Program," offered by Melrose-Wakefield Hospital, may be the answer. This unique program is designed so that new mothers are able to exercise with their babies. Mothers can enjoy quality time with their babies while getting into shape.

During the hour of activity, moms exercise to music with other new mothers. The program also offers infant massage, nursery rhymes and ball play for your child. "Mothers and Babies Exercise Program" meets on Wednesday mornings from 10 to 11 a.m., beginning January 13. The exercise class is held in the Melrose-Wakefield Hospital Family Education Center (formerly Franklin School), located at the corner of Franklin and Main Streets in Melrose. The class is led by a qualified MWH childbirth education instructor. Registration is required and there is a $30 fee for the class.

"sleep in the spare bedroom all the time."

Tony Stack from Dublin, Ireland told me how he proposed to his wife, Mary. "Mary dear, would you like to be buried with my folks?"...Jimmy Fanikos of Melrose thinks that Hertz Van Rental was a Dutch Painter...I didn't go to the newspaper office last week because of the 15 inches of "partly cloudy" on my driveway.

Folks, I'm not the usual loveable Chipper as far as advertising gimmicks are concerned - like items costing 19-29-39-49 cents, etc. and another thing, those debates and cash-backs drive me bananas. Kathy just sent a rebate coupon for 25¢ and it cost 29¢ for the stamp. When I told her how stupid she was she shouted, "Look here you four-eyed idiot, I lose four cents while those nuts lose 25 cents." Gee folks, I wonder if that doesn't make "cents"?...I overheard Kathy telling my Aunt Nora, "We must plan again to go to New York for a few days. I'm running out of towels."

Personality Winners: Fire Chief Don Wood, Lt. Don Jackson, Firefighter David Roy, Catherine Casey and Grace Fuller, all of Reading; Thomas Butler, Christopher M. Richard Hamel of Winchester wrote home from college, "Dear Mom and Dad, I haven't heard from you in nearly a month. Please send me a check for $100 so I'll know you're all right"...The minister announced, "I will now name the men and women I want to 'volunteer' their services for the spring bazaar"...George Gould walked into Reardon's thirst parlor with a pet mouse in his shirt pocket. He ordered a drink from Pottsie Geary, the bartender, and drank most of it then gave a little sip to the pet mouse. After an hour of this routine, Pottsie said, "You've had enough. No more drinks for you!" "Oh yeah?" George shouted, "Well you know what you can do with your drinks!" The mouse peeked his little head out of the shirt pocket and squeaked out, "Yeah! and that goes for your cat, too!"

Folks, you will never see any eight-cylinder words in Woodchips because I don't know any. I write like an outboard motor - I just keep putt-putt-putting along...Mario DiMino of Stoneham said, "Chipper, the college I attended turned out some great men." "Oh, I didn't know that, Mario," I replied, "When did you graduate?" "I didn't," Mario said, "I was one of those that was turned out."

Here are a few of many people I really miss: Linda Genovese, Buddy and Eleanor Stratton and Tom Jordan, all of North Reading; Maureen McGurn, Suzie Q. ## Reduction mammoplasty

From S-4

The mother of five and grandmother of four, Ms. Yetman-Higgins underwent a procedure more commonly done on patients between the ages of 20 and 45. However, Dr. Kohli maintains that her age was not a concern. "Age is not a limitation, not a criteria by which we decide whether a person should have this surgery or not. The criteria are first that the patient's breasts are large enough to cause a problem, and that the patient has no serious medical conditions that would make us reconsider anesthesia. My patients have ranged in age from 17 to well into their seventies."

Although the decision to go through with the reduction was not a difficult one for Ms. Yetman-Higgins, who was trained in the United States Navy as a nurse in World War II and is familiar with surgical procedures, Dr. Kohli explains that some women, along with their spouses, family or friends, might harbor doubts or fears. "Breast reduction surgery is quite an emotional issue, so my job is to advise them properly. Sometimes the patient is very excited about the surgery, but her husband or boyfriend has specific concerns. I'll meet with both of them, explain the procedure, give them some brochures to take home. On another visit I'll show them a video that summarizes the information I've given them."

While breast augmentation, which involves implants, has been getting negative press in the last year or so, the number of breast reductions has steadily increased. According to Dr. Kohli and his associates, Drs. Rao and Gee, also plastic surgeons at The Center, improvements in monitoring devices used for anesthesia over the past 10 to 15 years have made surgery safer and more available for a broad range of individuals.

Both the reduction and meeting her new love have turned Ms. Yetman-Higgins' life around. "I feel that I'm in my second youth, that it's a new beginning for me, and yet I have the wisdom that I didn't have in my earlier years," she says, her face aglow. "I like myself now, and I like just where I am at 68!"
